UW-Parkside Center for Economic Education Announces Its Spring 2006 Program

Thinking Globally:

Effective Lessons for Teaching About the Interdependent World Economy

The Center for Economic Education at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside will be conducting a one-day workshop on the economic principles of international trade. There are few topics in economics that are more important and, at the same time, more misunderstood, than the economics of international trade. As the world's economies become more open to trade, it is critical that our students comprehend the economic forces that will impact their lives. This workshop will give middle and high school teachers of economics well-designed curriculum materials that they can bring directly into their classrooms.

The workshop is presented by the University of Wisconsin-Parkside Center for Economic Education, made possible by National Council on Economic Education, through funding from the International Monetary Fund.
