

PRELUDE TO THE CIVIL WAR

Two Fridays: September 7 & September 14
Molinaro D139 1 – 3 PM

The Fall of Mexico City during the Mexican-American War, 1847

This two-session class focuses on the territorial expansion accompanying the Mexican American War (1846-1848) and its explosive political aftermath. Expanding the nation’s territorial size also meant the potential extension of slavery into the West. The American political system attempted to resolve this debate, but the politics of the 1850s merely exacerbated tensions over slavery. With the South fearing the loss of their slaves and the North wanting to limit slavery’s expansion, a war over slavery’s future eventually occurred.

Dr. Sandra Moats received her Ph.D. in History from UCLA in 2001, her Masters and Bachelor degrees from Smith College. She has been at Parkside since 2004 and achieved the rank of Associate Professor in 2010. She is completing a second book entitled “Building a Neutral Nation: America in the Global 18th century Atlantic.” She has held long term fellowships at George Washington’s Mount Vernon and UW-Madison’s Institute for Research in the Humanities. Anyone who has been at ALL very long will remember the classes that Sandy did on the 1st half of American History pre-contact through the Civil War and will be happy that she has returned to Parkside and agreed to do another class.
