Set early in the Civil War, this play was inspired by real-life characters who were involved in a critical event in history. Major General Benjamin Butler of the Union Army has just arrived to take command of Fort Monroe, a Union outpost located in Virginia, a state that hours ago seceded. In addition to the threat of imminent attack, three escaped slaves have appeared at the fort seeking sanctuary. The general, a former lawyer, is required to return the slaves to their “rightful owner,” a colonel in the Confederate Army. Meanwhile, one of the slaves, Shepard Mallory, eloquently pleads his case. Richard Stroud’s splendid play, a battle of wits for the soul of the nation, is part comedy, part historical drama, part biography, all at the same time.

Join ALL to see the Milwaukee premiere of Ben Butler at the Milwaukee Chamber Theatre. Once again, Don Cress has generously donated a block of tickets to us, and we will be having an early dinner after the play at Trattoria di Carlo on Howell Street in Oak Creek. See menu, reverse side. Questions? Call Frances Kavenik, 262-654-7570
