

Sponsored by UW-Parkside's Politics Philosophy and Law department in the College of Social Sciences and Professional Studies, and the Racine Public Library

Prepping for the Primaries

In the two party majority rule based system of American presidential politics, primaries are often predictable, leading to an even more predictable Party Convention.

This year, we have seen some different twists and turns in both the Republican and Democratic campaigns, and it is likely that the primaries in Spring 2016 will remain surprising and perhaps even perplexing.

Faculty from the University of Wisconsin-Parkside will lead a conversation to 'sort it all out' and help participants compare and evaluate the prospective candidates and also to understand the intricacies of the American electoral system that may have an impact on who is nominated, and who is elected.

April 4 | 6:30-8 pm
Racine Public Library
75 7th Street
Racine, Wisconsin

AS CITIZENS, WE WANT TO PARTICIPATE IN THE ELECTORAL PROCESS.

WOULDN'T IT BE NICE TO KNOW WHAT WE'RE DOING?

Panelist will make a brief presentation on the primaries, the candidates, and the issues. Followed by discussion and input from the audience.

Jennifer Correa, PhD
Sociology
Assistant Professor
Sociology/Anthropology
UW- Parkside

Craig Frizzell, PhD
Political Science
Associate Lecturer
Politics Philosophy and Law
UW-Parkside

Christopher Hudspeth, PhD
Ethics
Assistant Professor
Politics Philosophy and Law
UW-Parkside

Developing Society's Professionals

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL SCIENCES AND PROFESSIONAL STUDIES

Be. Real. Amazing.

UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN PARKSIDE