Colleagues,

I know the past two weeks have been difficult and expect the remaining weeks of the semester are likely to hold additional challenges as we cope with the virus and you change so much of how you engage with each other and with your students. If there is a silver lining, perhaps it is knowing we are capable of truly significant change when it is necessary. I find it hard to imagine that facile criticisms of inertia in higher education are as justifiable now as they were just two weeks ago.

Thank you for all you have done and all you will do to support our students in the coming weeks.
