

Dear colleagues,

I ask if you might circulate this opportunity to instructors on your campus. Registration is free and meals are provided. I also wish to thank you for circulating our call for proposals – we will have workshop facilitators from various campuses within the System. The full program will be available within the next couple of weeks. All the best –
Caroline Boswell, UWGB

The Center for the Advancement of Teaching and Learning and the Instructional Development Council will be hosting the

Instructional Development Institute

Thursday, January 18, 2018

8:00AM-4:30PM (Registration starting at 7:45)

The institute features workshop sessions to explore pedagogical issues, faculty development opportunities, specific challenges in instruction, high-impact practices, and more showcasing the thoughtful minds of our community at work as they grapple with the interesting problems percolating in higher education.

Special this year

This year's institute coincides with UW-Green Bay's "Becoming a Student-Ready University" initiative, sponsored by the Office of the Provost and Business and Finance. The morning will kick off with a special keynote by Dr. Christine Harrington, who will speak to our entire campus community about how small actions can have a big impact on student achievement. She will ask us to consider how student experiences in and out of the classroom make a huge difference in terms of persistence and goal completion, and she will follow-up by encouraging us to discuss the small actions that staff, faculty, and administrators can take to help students succeed.

There is no cost to attend and meals will be provided with your registration.

Space is limited, so register below today!
